Decorative Footpaths Utilising Modern Surfacing in a Historic Location

NatraTex Cotswold was delivered to Bath Spa University for use on their decorative footpaths. Being situated in a historic setting, the surfacing had to provide a high quality and hard wearing finish while being sympathetic to the university buildings. The City of Bath has been a UNESCO World Heritage site since 1987. Its famous architecture and history attracts many visitors and is a popular place for academic study.

The perfect solution in this scenario was NatraTex Cotswold, being a very popular and adaptable coloured surfacing within the NatraTex Range. The buff coloured surface course sits perfectly next to the architecture, complimenting the buildings due to the natural stone aggregate. Beneath the pleasing aesthetics lie a combination of fully bound hard landscaping elements which deliver maximum durability.

NatraTex Cotswold is popular amongst businesses and education sectors around the United Kingdom due to its proven hard-wearing qualities.

NatraTex asphalt has been designed and developed to be as straightforward to apply as possible, helping to keep projects running along their designated timescale and within budget. This great quality finish is perfectly displayed along the decorative footpaths of Bath Spa University. The warm tones of NatraTex Cotswold compliment the honey coloured limestone of the university buildings.
